

What Can I Do to Lower My Cardiovascular Risk? Self-management

How can I prevent having a heart attack or stroke?

The best thing you can do is to live a healthy lifestyle. The following can help to reduce your chance for developing cardiovascular disease. Any lifestyle change is a good start. It is important to continue with these healthy lifestyle choices even if your health care provider recommends that you start taking a medication as well.

- 1) Stop Smoking: If you currently smoke, think about whether you are ready to try stopping. Your health care provider can help with options, including medications to support you. To get started visit:

- 2) Physical Activity: Try to aim for 150 minutes of moderate aerobic activity per week (e.g., brisk walking). Start slowly and build up to 30 minutes, at least 5 times a week. It is also recommended that you avoid long periods (> 1 – 2 hours) of “sitting” or not moving. To review the benefits of being physically active, watch these videos to learn more:

- 3) Healthy Eating: Following what is called a Mediterranean type of eating pattern has been shown to lower your risk of having a heart attack or stroke. This type of diet includes the following: a high intake of olive oil, fruit, vegetables, whole grains, nuts and legumes; moderate intake of fish and poultry; low intake of full-fat dairy products, red meat, processed meats and sweets.
